Attorneys acting for the rapper's family said federal agents with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security raided Balentine's home Tuesday and seized her passport, according to TMZ. An official with the agency confirmed the raid, but said the agents were serving a search warrant related to an unspecified matter. She was born in Birmingham, Ala., but her family relocated to Macon, Ga., when she was young. She entered the entertainment industry at age 19. Her professional musical career began in 1995 with Atlantic Records when she was signed to the record label's "Hip Hop Classics" subsidiary. She was also part of the vocal talent for Goodie Mob's 1996 single "Luv Your Hair." The first single from her debut album "Independent Women," "Somebody I Used To Know," was released in 1997. She performed the song for AOL's "Click" during the same year. In 1998, she starred in the Nickelodeon family television sitcom, "Ridiculousness," playing the role of Sidney "Trick" Conroy. She also played the voice of Sheila the cougar in "Antz." Her other credits include the Oscar-nominated short, "Sittin' Here" (1991) and the movie "The Sixth Man" (1997). In April, a study released by the Center for Investigative Reporting concluded Balentine was one of six black Hollywood actresses who had been unknowingly photographed by actors on the set of the movie "Crash." The actors photographed Balentine, because she was in "black face"
