EuroCent Disk Recovery Pro Screenshots:Q: How does one normalize a distance field to the image? Background: I have a distance field texture. The max length of one distance field texture data is 32 bits, and the texture is 8 bits per color channel. I am trying to find a way to calculate the image coordinates (u,v) of the points in the distance field texture. Problems: If I had the texture as a 32 bit floating point value, i.e. 0.510645765064576, I know how to calculate the distances in the 32 bit field. I know that the distance between an interpolated point (u,v) and any point of the image is given by: New points with $u = 1$ to width of image - 1, $v = 0$ New points with $u = 0$, $v = 0$ to the right of the first texture point New points with $u = 0$, $v =$ height of image - 1 to the top of the image New points with $u =$ width of image - 1, $v =$ height of image - 1 The problem is how to normalize the distance. I already figured out how to convert it to a 32 bit floating point value using FloatToInt (which is 4.2427172361472716E-7), but the problem is this: I want to normalize it to fit in the original image. I am aware that I could calculate the ratio of the distance and then multiply it by the input image width and height. But how could I calculate this ratio? I tried calculating the ratio by dividing the texture's maximum (32 bit) value by the original image width and height and then multiplying the resulting ratio times the width and height of the image, but this didn't work. Did I calculate this ratio wrong? Is there a better way to normalize a distance field texture? A: Example: Say you have an image with width 128 and height 128: After calculating a distance field, say you have u values Df: [x_1,x_2,x_3,....,

EuroCent Disk Recovery is a small application especially designed to help you create backups and restore damaged files from the protected folders. Using the program is a breeze since all you have to do is set the path to the directories and choose the output location then simply press the 'Recover' button. EuroCent Disk Recovery Key Features: : Fully automatic Recover damaged files from anywhere on your hard drive - including external USB and network drives. Restore lost files from USB and external hard drives The lost or inaccessible files can be recovered from almost any external drive available today. Fixed or incremental backup It is not necessary to create a complete backup before restoring a damaged file. Instead, you can use a preset backup (or the auto-generated one), specify the damaged file or the affected part of the file and pick the location where you want to restore the data. It is a very handy option because it not only saves valuable disk space, but also gives you a quick recovery. File system verification If you need to use the backups created with another version of Windows, EuroCent Disk Recovery will be able to verify the integrity of the file system of the backup. The verification is run automatically for each backup, so you don't need to worry about it. Batch backup We all know that keeping a track of an immense amount of data is extremely difficult, especially on a PC with limited hard drive space. With the batch backup feature of EuroCent Disk Recovery, you don't have to worry about the size of the backup anymore. These days, it's not necessary to backup an entire system, it's enough to backup an individual folder. The backup time can be reduced to about 1/4 of the usual time, and you can even set the desired backup date and time. Error protection EuroCent Disk Recovery automatically generates backup data for each user and each program using data on the hard drive. In case of a system failure, you can use the generated data to restore the damaged part of the hard drive. USB drive protection You can use EuroCent Disk Recovery to back up your USB drive. You can even use these backup files to restore the deleted data from your USB drive. Disk space protection If you have too many files on your drive, you can use this tool to get rid of the extra files.
