I am sure that we all have more or less, problems of a connection with our partner. It can be sexual, too, like too big of expectations, distrust, problems with relations or stress. This can also be frustration – not everyone feels that good with something and then you have to do nothing. I can help. I am not a certified psychotherapist, but I can share some pearls from experience with my problems. For example, the ones that can be helped a bit, and the ones you cannot. You will have to find the time to analyze your personal problems yourself, because they are not the same for all of us. 2. More time Some people do not get this quite right. And if you spend half an hour more to get the result is that you can focus half an hour less at your partner and therefore also your partner will feel the same. 3. Money Some people do not understand that money cannot solve all things. If you are willing to invest in your relationship – you have to take it seriously. Do not wait for the results to appear by themselves. Do not think that the more you pay, the more you have to say – it is not like that. It should work another way. The result comes if you both have time and will. 4
