Those satellites are used to measure not only greenhouse gas emissions but more relevant quantities, such as which individual chemicals make up the most common greenhouse gases, how the two types of gases differ in the stratosphere, and what drives the changes in emissions over time. In particular, by comparing data collected by these two satellites, scientists are able to isolate the effect of sunlight on stratospheric methane emissions on the world's latitudes. By incorporating a simple, efficient instrument for rapidly collecting air samples, NOAA's EarthSAT-A mission is able to obtain the first direct observations of the distribution of stratospheric methane and carbon dioxide. The instruments are the same general type of instruments used on NOAA's Aqua and Aura missions, modified to read multiple wavelengths of electromagnetic radiation instead of measuring a single, narrowband wavelength such as in the solar wind. This allows scientists to monitor large regions and distinguish between different gases. For the ground-based facilities that track balloons, the instrument's low weight and compact design mean the instruments need minimal support. The team compared their data to higher-resolution observations from the balloon and from other research aircraft. "With this instrument, our balloon

A joint investigation carried out by the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) and the National Investigation Agency (NIA) led to the arrest of an Indian American man in connection with a case of passport fraud and unlawful use of visas, the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) said on Friday. "An Indian-American man has been arrested by NIA/CBI in US, Delhi; passport fraud and unlawful use of visas suspected. Arrest was made near Delhi. Details to follow," MEA spokesperson Raveesh Kumar tweeted. The ministry, however, gave no further details about the arrest and the charges against the accused, but said that the US Department of Justice (DOJ) had "lodged a complaint". The Manesar-based office of the department was not immediately available for comment. "We are aware of it. We are in process of looking into the matter and have no comments on it at the moment," a source in the ministry told Mint. The alleged offence has come to light after an individual was detained by the US Department of Homeland Security for violating Federal law by illegally obtaining a United States (US) passport in India. The documents, if true, suggests that the suspect was able to obtain a passport to defraud the US government by using forged visas. According to the US Department of Justice, a visa is not valid until the expiration date shown on the visa has passed. "This forgery was done by the suspect using forged documents," the ministry spokesperson tweeted. This forgery was done by the suspect using forged documents. The report published by 3e33713323
