But even with an in-depth understanding of Photoshop, many people don't know how to create a personal logo for their business. Today, it's a basic skill that is fundamental to doing business in our digital world. Here are 10 tools that will help you create your own personal logo from scratch. 10 Tools to Create a Logo It's easy to have a logo designed professionally, but in the world of web design and social media, sometimes it's important to be more creative and hands-on. For example, when a client wants a website to have their own custom logo for their business, then a design based on their brand's existing visual identity is not a good use of one's time. 1. Vector Graphics Vector graphics are computer-generated graphics that have been simplified to create clean and layered designs that can be manipulated with any program. There are two types of vector graphics: outline and bitmap. Outline-based vectors have information stored in separate elements called paths. They are clean and easy to manipulate without the need to flatten a design, or change colors, size, or other aspects. There are software applications that create these shapes and have the ability to alter them. Bitmap-based graphics have information stored in a bitmap and are typically used for photos and other photographs. Bitmap-based graphics have the same limitations as other graphics like adding colors and sizes, but they cannot be easily manipulated like a vector graphic. What's the point? You can create a logo using a vector graphic, or bitmap, and create multiple versions of your logo using different file formats including TIFF and PDF, or even the screen shot of your original logo itself. 2. Font Creation Before creating a logo, it's important to identify a font that suits your brand's style. In the early days of the web, people were often using monospaced fonts, but these days it's better to use a serif or sans-serif font. Choose a font that is more legible at medium sizes. You can download fonts from the Internet or create your own. Whether your font is created from scratch or purchased, you must ensure that it is installed on your computer. If you are creating your own logo, you should think about the size of the font. An excessively large logo will not be legible, and conversely, an extremely small font will be difficult to read. 3. Color Palettes

Sovereign wealth funds and the Chinese economy: survival of the fittest Managing a country's sovereign wealth fund is a big challenge. Most of the world's sovereign wealth funds are based in the West, but China, India and other emerging markets have become increasingly interested in these funds. China's premier sovereign wealth fund, the China Investment Corp (CIC), has grown fast, attracting funds of all sizes in its home market. However, while China's private sector is growing, China's government still controls how these funds are managed. Sovereign wealth funds are explicitly controlled by the government and are generally separate from the government's own assets. The government, in turn, can manage these funds in its own interests. This makes their impact on China's economy hard to measure, but some of the most important evidence is in the CIC's annual reports. Many of these reports, however, are not available for use in the West. The CIC has increased its assets and its investments since its 2008 report, as shown in Figure 1. The CIC was established in 2002, and grew from ~$100bn to ~$500bn by 2008. By 2017, it was reportedly ~$700bn. The CIC is investing more of its assets in China and China-related investments. The CIC's direct investments grew from ~$23bn in 2002 to ~$149bn in 2017. These direct investments are grouped into a few broad categories: directly investing in companies, of which ~60% are businesses operating in China and ~40% are companies outside China (Figure 2). By 2017, ~50% of CIC direct investments were in the manufacturing sector, ~40% in real estate, and ~10% in mining, oil and gas and finance. The vast majority of CIC direct investments are in the Chinese economy, leaving the CIC with ~35% of its assets outside China. The CIC is also investing in mainland Chinese assets that are not majority-owned. As of 2017, ~10% of CIC direct investments were through mainland Chinese companies and ~60% of mainland Chinese investments were in mainland China. These mainland Chinese investments are overwhelmingly in the real estate sector, ~30% of which was in the Chinese real estate sector. The CIC has been very active in the Chinese property markets, investing in national companies like State Grid Corp and private real estate
