The shooting happened shortly before 6:15 p.m. Sunday at a shooting range on Johnston Road in O'Fallon, according to St. Louis County Police. The victim told police he was sitting in a car outside the range when he heard a gunshot and was hit in the right side of his leg. Police said he told the dispatcher the shooter was black. RELATED: Investigators seek possible motive in shooting of O'Fallon school teacher The victim was treated at a nearby hospital. It was not clear if he was a student at Carver Academy Middle School, where the shooting took place, or had been a student in the past. Police said the victim recognized the black four-door car and its window was down during the incident. Three teachers were in the car, and a third person in the car carried a handgun. The shooting occurred at the range that is operated by Carver Academy. "It's the middle of the week and people are shooting here," said Tammy Peloquin, 37, who witnessed the shooting. The shooting range has posted "No Thumb Guns" signage in the front window. Peloquin, who said she's never known anyone to shoot a gun there, said the teachers told students after the shooting that it was "inadvertent." Officers booked the teacher and two other people with assault in the first degree and armed criminal action charges. The teacher's employment status was unknown. The victims' names were not immediately released.Mechanically controllable fluid delivery devices (e.g. syringes) may be used for a variety of purposes, including injecting or withdrawing fluids, fluid delivery, fluid drawing or the like. Controllable fluid delivery devices such as syringes may be advantageous to avoid contaminating the environment with fluid waste and to provide precise fluid delivery (e.g. delivery of a precise amount of fluid or volumes of fluid). Controllable fluid delivery devices may be constructed with a variety of actuation mechanisms, including, for example, hydraulically activated actuation mechanisms, electrohydraulically actuated mechanisms, electrically activated mechanisms, pneum

To review outcomes in a large series of patients (n = 670) having surgery for intractable epilepsy at one centre to determine the rate of seizure freedom, duration of follow-up, and predictors of long-term success. We reviewed the medical records of all patients who underwent epilepsy surgery at the Cambridge Epilepsy Surgery Programme between 1989 and 2009. Patients who completed a 5-year follow-up were included in the study. Patients were followed up for an average of 6.2 years (median 4.2 years, SD 2.6). Overall, 7% had a good outcome (Engel Class I) and 44% had a good outcome with two or more years of seizure freedom (Engel Class I+II) at the time of the final follow-up. The overall probability of Engel Class I+II outcome was 43% at 5 years and 20% at 10 years. Patients who achieved Engel Class I+II outcome had significantly fewer post-operative seizures at final follow-up than those who did not (p < 0.001). How to write a function in ruby which can evaluate an arbitrary string in ruby I have a situation where I need to evaluate an arbitrary string (e.g. if "hello", send "world"). How can I write a function that can evaluate such strings in ruby? I am finding it hard to find a way for this. A: First, you can get a string array in the block: def test "this is just a test".split() end test # => ["", "", "is", "", "just", "", "a", "", "test"] You can split() the string on the given conditions with a regex. An example: irb> "my string for a test".split(/(?=3e33713323
