Key Macro lets you record a video or photo of any key. This is easy with this software. It allows you to record keystrokes with a click on the mouse and it can even capture the keystrokes on Mac OS X or Windows. With KeyMacro you can record hotkeys, mouse clicks, mouse movements, touch events, sound events and any type of clipboard content and you can also put keybindings in your hotkey definitions. To begin recording with KeyMacro, you must create a new macro profile for your keyboard. If you have already created a profile, you may simply want to import it, but you must first choose which action you want to record (press, click,...). The KeyMacro software has several default profiles. If you have not created a new profile, you may want to create a new one. There are various types of profiles, such as: - Hotkey profiles that you can use to define hotkeys. This is similar to the hotkeys you define in the OS X menu bar. - Click profiles that you can use to capture a mouse click. - Mouse movement profiles that you can use to capture the mouse movement. - Touch profiles that you can use to capture touchscreen events. - Click application profiles that you can use to capture a mouse click inside an application. - Mouse click profiles that you can use to capture a mouse click anywhere in the application. - Mouse movement profiles that you can use to capture the mouse movement anywhere in the application. - Sound profile that allows you to capture the sound clip while running an application. - Text clipboard profiles that you can use to capture text that is copied or pasted from the clipboard. - Drag drop profiles that allow you to record events when a file or folder is dragged and dropped to the program. - Keystroke profiles that capture keystrokes. - Special profiles that capture extra events like mouse clicks on non-clickable regions of the screen or system-wide events that are triggered by the computer, such as opening the Start menu, a new window or application, clicking the Windows button and more. - Key focus profiles that record what keyboard you are using. This is especially useful when you are using multiple keyboards. - Notebook profiles that capture various events when you are using different notebooks. - Working document profiles that capture events when you are working on a document. - Web browser profiles that capture events when you are viewing a web page or using an 1d6a3396d6
