If you are looking for a free alternative to Photoshop, or are looking to learn the basics of it, then we've come up with a guide to help you out. We've broken Photoshop into a few separate parts below. Download: A free, open-source alternative to Photoshop that you can download for Windows, Mac, and Linux. Photoshop Elements If you're just starting out, we recommend Photoshop Elements over Photoshop CS5 or CS6. It offers many of the same features. When should I consider switching to Photoshop? When you're more advanced, you can move to the next step. I don't want to spend a lot of money on software This doesn't mean that you should get a $250+ license of Photoshop. You could always use Photoshop for free and spend the money on other software (more on that later). So, if you can't afford to invest in Photoshop right away, you can try these free alternatives for a while. When I've tried using an alternative, it didn't work as well You might find that some alternatives don't offer you as many tools as you need. For example, if you're making art and you need the advanced brushes of the professional version, you can try Manga Studio, which has over 50,000 brushes. On the other hand, if you're a designer and you need tools that create high-resolution graphics, you can try Affinity Designer which has 3,000+ tools. You can see the best alternatives for Photoshop here If you find a free alternative that works well for you, stick with it and don't upgrade! It's a tool

Q: How do I call a method of an object in a collection and get that method's return value? I know that in .NET 3.5 and earlier, this was possible using the Reflection API. I'm seeing this new functionality in the .NET 3.5 C# 3.0 API (MSDN) and I'm wondering how one calls this method. What I'm trying to do is to call a method of an object in a collection and get the return value out. For example, given a collection of objects, I want to call a method in each object, and store those values in a collection. We're currently using Castle.ActiveRecord and asp.net's model binding for some datagrids and user controls. The problem is that I can't use Castle.ActiveRecord since it doesn't apply the [OptionalField] attribute to the fields I'm bound to, so I can't make a strongly typed view model. We're trying to re-write this with a custom model binder so that we can use [OptionalField]. The only thing I can think of is to write a custom model binder that can call a [NonOptionalField] method and make a collection of those values. But I'm hoping that there is a better way. Edit: I ended up using the code below. Now the collection of values that is returned is valid. `public static TResult CallPropertyValue(this DataRow row, string propName) { PropertyInfo propInfo = row.Table.Rows[0].ItemArray[propName] as PropertyInfo; if (propInfo == null) { throw new Exception("Property does not exist."); } object val = propInfo.GetValue(row, null); if (val == null) { return default(TResult); } return (TResult)val; } public class MyModelBinder : IModelBinder { public object BindModel(ControllerContext controllerContext, ModelBindingContext bindingContext) { MyModel model = new MyModel(); foreach (`
