the scene she's in. She may be in a jewelry store, but the next scene she's outside snorting drugs and getting tested for AIDS. She is in some ways a wild-eyed and lawless character, but it's a type that is familiar to fans of earlier days, from the early 70s to the late 70s. She's an icon for us, and we still see her at all of the concerts.

DRUG: It's common on many records, but no one's doing it quite the way you do. JUDGE: You're the first person in the world to put it on his album cover.

DRUG: It's really important for us to be able to be rebellious. We have nothing in common with the world that's ruling the day, and it's nice to be able to do something like this.

JUDGE: The band still plays this album live, at one time we played "Helpless" until we broke it.

JUDGE: You say you use the song to warn people of the dangers of the drug world.

DRUG: It's a cautionary tale that you don't want to listen to. The average person you're going to have a much better chance of scoring drugs that living in a mud hut.

JUDGE: You're also using the tag line "I Need a Miracle" to address people like yourself. You say that you need a miracle.

DRUG: I mean, I don't know why we should have been successful, if we weren't doing something right. I definitely don't think that I'm doing something wrong if I'm doing it well, so I guess what I really want to tell you is to keep on rockin' and keep on praying. Because that's a lot of help. JUDGE: You were surrounded by drug dealers in Miami. Was it scary? DRUG: It was weird, the whole drug thing was still in the single digits, so no. Not that much. As far as dealing, it was just kids running around with drugs, "hey, man, I've got this!" and selling them. We dealt with a lot of cigarette

Compresses your files, folders, and drives to save space. Duplicate files are detected, deleted, moved, and compressed. Automatic compression and de-duplication are fully integrated into the program. Version history and a useful Widget are also included. Updated 5:15 p.m. GRAND FORKS — A North Dakota electric company's plan to export power to South Dakota is looking grim, as utility regulators here and elsewhere reject the idea that regulators in the buyer state must approve the acquisition. Draft applications are pending that would allow Pinnacle West Capital to export electricity from the electric utility it owns in North Dakota and Montana to another electric utility it owns in South Dakota. Pinnacle West is allowed to do so under federal law, but such exports are technically illegal if states don't allow them. ADVERTISEMENT The decisions threaten Pinnacle West's plan to add the South Dakota utility to its Montana and North Dakota electric utilities to further reduce Pinnacle West's distribution costs. The New Jersey-based company says it may have to withdraw the applications until it gets approval to export. It's unclear how the regulatory decisions would impact the company. In 2011, Pinnacle West applied to set up three separate entities. The formation of a large electric utility would have resulted in regulatory approval for exports. Pinnacle West has cited what it calls a "cascade effect" that will allow the company to export electricity, from North Dakota to South Dakota and then to Montana and Montana. Pinnacle West stock fell $4.66 to $51.95 per share in morning trading. The North Dakota Public Utilities Commission and the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission have said the company needs to get approval from regulatory agencies in those states before it can complete the three-state export. But companies that sell electricity are free to export, so long as there is no federal law that prevents them, said North Dakota Bureau of Consumer Protection spokeswoman Susan Thompson. In South Dakota, Gov. Dennis Daugaard, a Republican, says Pinnacle West's plan is consistent with the state's values. "I can't imagine a circumstance in which a company, I could live with, that was building a pipeline to North Dakota from South Dakota," Daugaard said. South Dakota's Public Service Commission has cited safety concerns and worries about competition. The Montana Public Service

What's New in the Dup Scout Pro?

The reason for Dup Scout Pro: Duplicate data is a concern for many devices: we all have a few sets of photos on our phone containing the same shot twice, so the magnitude should naturally be much higher when it comes to our computers. A few sets of identical documents here, a video copied twice, and so on: drives have so much storage now that we tend to be less wary in how we use it. The storage hit might be negligible at first, but it can compound to something more severe with time. A tool like Dup Scout Pro is most suitable in such a situation: it scans your system for duplicate files and lays them all for you in a compact, functional interface. An efficient solution The software doesn't involve any complex operations for the end user: simply install it, boot it up, then commence a search. To do so, you'll have to create a profile in the app the default one works, too and select the target directories. You may also elect for the program to scan your entire drive, or your NAS devices and servers. After that, the scanning may begin. It doesn't take long for the tool to recognize duplicate files: it instantly recognized ours in less than 30 seconds. They're all laid out nicely on the interface, where information about the disk space usage, the number of duplicates, as well as their respective extensions is neatly presented. Manage duplicates When it comes to dealing with the duplicate files found by the utility, users can first generate charts to help them better visualize the situation. Charts to display the duplicates by category, extension, file size, date and creation time, and many other such parameters can be generated in an instant. Should they not want to completely erase them, users can choose to replace the duplicate files with shortcuts, move them to another directory, and even compress everything. This is all accessible via the Actions menu, which can also delete all the detected duplicates at once. You never know how many identical files you have on your computer and how much space they occupy, which is why a tool like Dup Scout Pro is useful. When you feel like deleting some stuff on your drives, running a scan through this utility wouldn't be a bad idea.Q: Why is this question considered off-topic?
