The purpose of this prospective, double-blind, randomized, multicenter study was to compare clinical efficacy of a single antimicrobial therapy versus a combination of two or three antimicrobials in chronic cystitis of 6 months or less. The study population consisted of 140 patients. Patients were randomly assigned to one of three groups. The first group (group A) received a single antimicrobial therapy with trimethoprim plus sulfamethoxazole, the second (group B) received trimethoprim plus nalidixic acid and the third (group C) received trimethoprim plus ciprofloxacin. Efficacy was assessed by clinical cure and bacteriologic eradication. Three patients dropped out of the study. At D90 clinical failure was observed in 2/31 patients (6.5%) of group A, in 3/32 (9.4%) of group B and in none of the patients of group C. Antibacterial eradication was observed in 77/81 (95.1%) of group A, in 60/74 (81.1%) of group B and in 14/19 (73.7%) of group C. The difference in bacteriologic eradication between group A and group C was statistically significant (p Education and information
