Operation: BoomSlang! v0.99.9 is now live! New features and updates are in place in this new update. Much of what you may be aware of is included, such as the Sniper Rifle, the Nitro Charge, the Nitro Powerup, The Tiki Gun, the Grenade Launcher, the RPG, and the new Hellion Character. IMPORTANT: please remember that the above are early development versions of the weapons, and as such are not functioning or currently working as intended. If you are interested in the Nitro Charge, RPG, Tiki

Gun, or Hellion, then please refrain from using them for a while until further notice.

This will help make sure they work as intended and do not have any unforeseen gameplay implications. Thanks for your ongoing support :) _____

The game is a text-based adventure set in a haunted house, with two main protagonists: Jack and Charlie. Your job is to help them finish an episode of their audio podcast, before the pair get murdered by a creature living in the house. The story is interesting and the premise interesting. It's definitely an experience that will stick with you long after you play it. The biggest problem is that there are many cons to the gameplay. The text-based format is cumbersome in a game of this size, so it's hard to enjoy it. The combat mechanics are very weak, just a simple click-to-shoot animation with no real penalty for missing. It's also a little too easy. The controls are a bit awkward, too. You can only go up and down a certain amount of stairs before you have to reload the house into the next location, which can be annoying. There's also a bonus maze at the end that is unique to this version, but not available to play in later episodes. Because of this, I recommend that you read the actual rules rather than relying on auto-populating the house with each save. The only real changes made to the game are cosmetic. There are stickers and sound effects placed throughout. The UI isn't much better than the text-based game. The menu is kind of awkward, and the save system works very inconsistently. The game tries to be a little social, but the hosts are kind of annoying and the text they share with you is just irritating. I know that this is not an easy experience to play, so you will find yourself frustrated at some points. You just need to understand that it's an enjoyable experience and you won't care too much about the negative points. I want to know how difficult it was to complete. It's a pretty small game, but there are a lot of places where you have to reload the house to move on with the story. It took me almost a half hour just to get through the game. I know that it should have taken 10 minutes or less, but I also know that it was a fun experience. If you enjoy story-driven games and don't mind a little difficulty, definitely check this game out. Reviewed on PC. The company behind Star Trek: Bridge Crew, Gernsbock Games is now working on an unannounced third game. The game is a complex 3D action puzzle platformer, and is being designed for mobile. Gameplay videos

BRAIN IN JETSCAPE is a very special game where you play the role of a brain that is in hot water. You have to save yourself from the disaster and help the others! You are a brain in a burning building. People can die when they touch you so you are in hot water. However, as you have studied brain science a lot in your life you know what to do: you can switch your brain off in case of acute danger to save yourself and the others. However, there is more here. We know you hate brain science! That is why we made you some brain surgery in order to deactivate your brain! Unfortunately you have not studied enough and you do not remember how to do this. However, by running around you discover objects that will help you. Some of them, like the burning candle, have only one use while others like the battery have several and are only effective in a limited way. For example: a crane in a burning building will help you get from one floor to another. However it can only help you if you use it on the ground and not on the top floor... It's up to you to find the critical objects and solve all the puzzles that you can find to deactivate your brain and save yourself and the others.

Q: sort by field (not index) Is there a way to sort by a field, not by an index in elasticsearch? i.e. { "order": 0, "fields": ["field1", "field2", "field3"] }, { "order": 0, "fields": ["field1", "field2", "field3"] }, { "order": 1, "fields": ["field1", "field2", "field3"] }, { "order": 1, "fields": [
