During the deal between Trader Whaaat and Hassankh, he accidentally released a sacrosanct command bestowed upon him by his master. The commands disguised the bots' insidious lures and deceived the traders. They were assembled secretly and woven with tiny steel chains, which were then wrapped around their backs by Hassankh and his cat, Brrrr. In order to blend into society and one day live among humans, Hassankh prepared a mask to disguise his appearance and broke into Trader Whaaat's house by the help of his pet dog, Chu. Chu removed the hexing mask and rubbed around the house. Hassankh then resealed the mask and continued to live with the humans just like them for the sake of his master and waited for the winning outcome. Many months later after the deal was half completed, Hassankh called on his master and asked him for another mask. But his wish was never fulfilled as he was killed before he could. Even his dog who chased the thieves away, and his cat was killed in the mean time. After a long period of time their quest was finally completed. Hassankh inquired his master to change into a mask himself for the sake of his huge progress in the travel field. And Master Sherka went on to finish his quest. He changed into the magic mask and lost nothing except his life.
