Q: How do I set a timeout for extending a While Loop I have a While Loop that will repeat once a day. I am using two different tables and the while loop is determining which table to use and executing all tasks in that table based on that determination. If that table was empty I want to be notified and to continue executing all the tasks in the other table. This is what I have so far:

How 3D Printing Will Change the Game for the Built Environment

More and more we can expect that the built environment will become easier to design, build and maintain with 3D printing. Building a house is a substantial task and most of us think that most of the process is fairly straightforward. However, building a house is certainly not as easy as one might think. Most home improvements require the collaboration of multiple trades (engineers, architects, contractors, etc.), and also requires certain permits (building permits, permits for sheetrock, electrical wiring permits, plumbing permits, and other government permits). More and more homeowners are opting to build their own houses with the help of 3D printing. To learn more about why 3D printing is changing the way homes are built and maintained, see the infographic below. Furthermore, 3D printing is one of the most affordable and innovative technologies that has opened up countless possibilities for industrial design and creative products. Developing an entire product in 3D has become a lot easier to do. With more and more development of 3D printing technologies, we expect to see more of the standard industries move into manufacturing over the next decade. As 3D printing technology continues to expand, so will the possibilities. Check out the infographic below for more on 3D printing and its impact in the built environment. P.S.
