subversion on Ubuntu? I'm trying to set up subversion with DOSBox on a Windows box. So I have DOSBox in the source code and I can type in `s(C:\subversion\bin\svn.exe' to view the source code of the svn at the svn location. I thought that this might be a good thing to get Subversion to work on my Ubuntu box too. But when I go in "file->open Repository" it still views the files in the Windows C:/ subversion directory. There's got to be something I'm doing wrong. A: It sounds like you want to use DOSBox for playing around with the source code to your Subversion installation, rather than actually using it to do development. If so, have you considered getting something like DosEmu? It runs DOSBox, so you can get Subversion going while you play around with it, and then load it up on Windows when you're ready for it to actually do your work. It might be a good way to learn Subversion's CLI, too. Personally, I'd say you should set up the whole thing on Windows, though, if you're planning to do any development with it. Don't think you're going to use Subversion to manage source code on Ubuntu? If so, there are much better ways to do that, so using DOSBox is a poor idea.
Q: Getting rid of problems with merge information found in database I have a table: [nku][nmv] 0 1 0 1 0 1 2 2 0 From a table '[nku]', I want to delete all the information which has the value '2', from the table '[nmv]' How to do it? A: Try this delete from nmv where nku in (select nku from nku
