For the sake of simplicity let's assume I have 100 observations of {x,y} pairs in which the only difference between the two variables is x is numeric and y is categorical. As I am relatively new to R I am learning how to use the following code: library(tidyr) library(RfGarch) # data set.seed(123) df

What's New in the TV Series Icon Pack 9?

If you are a designer or just a good fan of designs, you can surely use this freebie pack of icons to personalize your Apple TV, iPod Touch or iPhone's interface. If you want to change the looks of your iPhone, iPod Touch or Apple TV's interface with the standard icons provided by Apple then you should definitely try the TV Series Icon pack 9. If you want to modify the docks of your device then this set is the best choice for you. You can make your own dock items (no matter whether they are in the form of your app's icon, background, etc) by using the various icons provided in this pack. Furthermore, you can create custom themed icons for your apps or use them for the background of your iPhone, iPod Touch or Apple TV; as an example: to use them as a dock bar of the iPhone, iPod Touch or Apple TV. This icon pack is suitable for both users who are unaware of the advanced tools of desktop publishing and icon creation, and also for the developers who have never used an iPhone, iPod Touch or Apple TV's UI before. Moreover, you can use this freebie pack to create custom themes for iPhone, iPod Touch and Apple TV; your apps will not have the standard look of the Apple devices anymore. The pack also contains a high resolution icon with the resolution of 160*160 (32x32) and a transparent image for the background of the iPhone, iPod Touch and Apple TV. TV Series Icon pack 9 is a nicely designed collection that will enable you to completely overhaul all your dock items by customizing them with fresh new icons.
