Click this image to enlarge The next day, after we had returned from our trip, I overheard our babysitter complaining about our son and how he was not independent and would listen to her like a doormat. Our babysitter is a single mother and her son had come over to hang out that day. I became angry and I told her how my husband and I raised our boys and they turned out wonderful. My husband was in the air force and my son is a Marine. I continued, saying we want to raise our boys to be independent and not do what everyone else tells them to do. When I hear people talk down on other people's parenting decisions or mismanagement of a situation, I feel like I have to defend my husband and I because of the positive influence we have had on our sons. When your parents told you to do something...you did it, even if they usually didn't know what they were talking about. Now that doesn't mean you become a wet brain or that you don't do your homework or chores. It means you learned how to work well with other people or, in other words, you learned how to be a social person. And if you grew up in a home where you were told you couldn't have dessert until dinner was over or you couldn't go to the bathroom until mommy or daddy called you, well that may be why you have some issues with your social skills. After talking with my babysitter, I realize that I didn't really teach my boys to work with others. I taught them to follow orders and never say no. I found the perfect parenting manual for them. Sure, some of their friends got in trouble for doing what they wanted, but it wasn't their friends who got in trouble, it was us. I wanted them to stand up for themselves and I didn't tell them no because I didn't want them to feel bad about themselves or not take care of themselves. Sometimes we look in the mirror and think we are horrible parents when in fact we may not be as bad as others who have told their kids no a million times. We didn't raise them to be independent. We raised them to be dependent on us. Don't let someone else influence how you raise your children, just because they think they know better than you. It's not that they have a more right to be their parent than you do, but that they don't have the right to tell you e79caf774b

The occurrence of hepatic illnesses that are attributed to protozoa in man is not rare. These infections can be acquired through ingestion of contaminated water or food. The clinical features of infections that are caused by Giardia lamblia, Cryptosporidium parvum and Entamoeba histolytica are nonspecific, therefore the disease is very difficult to be diagnosed. The aim of this study was to evaluate the frequency of these infections in patients with liver diseases. In our retrospective study we analyzed the data obtained from 346 liver patients who were hospitalized in the Infectious Diseases Clinic of the Dicle University between 1st of January 2001 and 31st of December 2002. In total, 23.9% of patients
