That's a tadpole swimming in a tank in the background of the photo. I had no clue what to do with it. I just loved the way it came out. A little creepy but also sort of charming in a way. I don't want to put a lot of pressure on myself, but I will say that I got a nobel for fish and an award for photoshop. I am not sure how I will top that. For this week's Leila Day Award: Best Romance. A Prairie Rose is a western romance about Texas rancher Will Paxton, who meets Canadian trapper Claude Rainville when he rescues her from the Badlands. Will and Claude fall in love against the backdrop of the American Civil War. I love historical stories, so I was super excited about this book. It was released in late 2015, but I had to hunt it down for awhile before I could read it. I had a few technical issues with my iPad, but they were all fixed and I have had the book for over a month now. It is well worth the wait. I will preface this by saying that this isn't your typical romance story about a hot and loving couple who end up getting married and having a bunch of kids. There is history, but it is definitely not about war. The book is told from both perspectives, but I found myself getting lost in Will's world a bit more than Claude's, but I didn't mind that. The author, Kate Summerscale, definitely has a way with words. I felt like she was able to weave the western history into the story seamlessly, and it helped to create a unique read for me. I was also pleasantly surprised at how well the author dealt with cattle ranching in the 1800's. This is supposed to be a romance, but if you're a history buff, you might enjoy this read more. It is set in the Texas panhandle and the Badlands, which are two highly contested areas. 6d1f23a050
