I have tried: `$('.lat', marker).click(function() { var updateLat = $(this).data('lat') * 1.1; console.log(updateLat); update(updateLat); });` I have also tried to not reassign but after the function is called: `$('.lat', marker).click(function() { var updateLat = $(this).data('lat') * 1.1; console.log(updateLat); update(updateLat); updateLat = null; });` But nothing is being printed to the console. A: You are in the right track. You just need to replace this line: `update(updateLat);` to this: `updateLat = updateLat * 1.1;` Explanation: The result of an assignment expression in JavaScript is the same as the right-hand side of the assignment. You were trying to update the updateLat variable, which you don't have. by a rule of thumb for establishing a prima facie case of discrimination based on any kind of protected activity. Id. at 761.
